Let us now discuss another subject

Scientists have in recent years learned a lot more about how living things work. This knowledge is leading to new ways of changing micro-organisms (such as yeast), crops and farm animals, and the cells of the human body. Most of these new possibilities will be very useful, but some concern has been expressed about the possible risks involved. Decisions must be made about what activities should be encouraged, prevented or controlled, and how best to satisfy the need for better information on this issue. We are interested in hearing the views of people like yourself.

Q.35. Science and technology change the way we live.

I am going to read out a list of areas in which new technologies are currently developing.

For each of these areas, do you think it will improve our way of life in the next 20 years, it will have no effect, or it will make things worse ?

Q.36. I have here a list of some developments of that kind. In your opinion, which of these are linked to biotechnology and which are not ? (SHOW CARD 'Q.36')

Making use of living micro-organisms, for example for plant protection (bio-pesticides)	174	1		2	3
Food processing such as using yeast for the production of bread or beer	175	1		2	3
Treating hereditary human diseases by modifying the tissue involved	76	1		2	3

In fact, most of these are examples of biotechnology. I would like to ask you about some of these in more detail.

Q.37. Let us start with an example concerning plants.
Scientists are trying to use biotechnology to change plants, in ways that may be quicker or more precise than traditional breeding programmes, in order to make the plants more useful.
For example, make them resistant to diseases or pests, make them ripen faster or give them the ability to grow in dry or salty soils.
Please indicate to what extent you agree or disagree with each of the following statements concerning plant research (SHOW CARD 'Q.37')?

Q.38. Here is an example concerning micro-organisms, such as the yeast we use to make bread, or beer, or yoghurt; or the micro-fungi we use to make medicines such as penicillin. Scientists know how to change these micro-organisms through biotechnology, in order to improve their performance - that means, getting them to work faster or even to produce new products. Please indicate to what extent you agree or disagree with each of the following statements concerning research and micro-organisms (SHOW CARD 'Q.38')?

Q.39. Some of these micro-organisms are used to break down sewage and other waste products and to turn them into materials harmless to the soil.

Here again, scientists are trying, through biotechnology, to improve these micro-organisms. They are trying to make them work faster or to make them clean up oil-slicks or other contaminants in the environment.
