Appendix 1

	Sample %	Registrar General %
Urban	82	80
Rural	18	20
Total	100%	100%

Comparison with the Registrar General's figures for age, however, shows a less good fit. This is principally because the Electoral Registers used were at a late stage of their life at the time when the sample was drawn, with the result that voters in their 20's are necessarily under-represented. The figures are:

	Sample %	Registrar General %
21-29	10	17
30-39	18	20
40-49	21	19
50-59	23	19
60+	28	25
Total	100%	100%

Out of the 2,000 voters whose names had been drawn, a total of 247 (12.3%) were either dead, permanently moved, not known or traceable at the given address, or the property was found to be empty or demolished. The effective sample was thus reduced to 1,753. Of these, 169 refused to be interviewed, 71 were not found at home despite successive recalls, 44 could not be interviewed on account of illness, 40 were away temporarily, and 14 could not be interviewed for miscellaneous other reasons. Out of the effective sample, therefore, a total of 338 voters (19.4%) could not be interviewed. In other words, the success of the sample, measured in terms of the productive calls as a percentage of the effective sample, is 80.6%. This figure may be compared with the result obtained by the Institute of Practitioners in Advertising, who carry out a three-monthly readership survey based on a national random sample. Their figure for a total of four samples drawn between July 1960 and July 1961 is 77.2% of an effective sample of 16,464 voters.
