THE GALLUP ORGANIZATION
II. Survey details

This Flash Eurobarometer 318 “Attitudes towards the EU in the United Kingdom” was conducted on behalf of the European Commission Representation in the United Kingdom by Gallup Hungary.

Telephone interviews were conducted between the 22nd and the 26th of November 2010, by Gallup UK.

Representativeness of the results

The sample is representative of the population aged 15 years and above.

Sizes of the sample

The sample size was 1000 respondents in the UK.

A weighting factor was applied to the national results in order to compute a marginal total for the country in proportion to its population.

Questionnaires

The questionnaire prepared for this survey is reproduced at the end of this section (see hereafter).

Table of results

VOLUME C: RESPONDENTS’ DEMOGRAPHICS

The VOLUME C presents the country results broken down by the following socio-demographic variables:

- Sex (male, female)
- Age (15-24, 25-39, 40-54, 55+)
- Education (15&-, 16-20, 21&+, still in full time education)
- Subjective urbanisation (metropolitan zone; other town/urban centre; rural zone)
- Occupation (self-employed, employee, manual worker, without a professional activity)
- Self-perceived level of EU information (informed, not informed)
- Attitudes towards the EU (consistently favourable, mixed, consistently unfavourable)

Sampling error

Surveys are designed and conducted to provide an estimate of a true value of characteristics of a population at a given time. An estimate of a survey is unlikely to exactly equal the true population quantity of interest for a variety of reasons. One of these reasons is that data in a survey are collected from only some – a sample of – members of the population, this to make data collection cheaper and faster. The “margin of error” is a common summary of sampling error, which quantifies uncertainty about (or confidence in) a survey result.

Usually, one calculates a 95 percent confidence interval of the format: survey estimate +/- margin of error. This interval of values will contain the true population value at least 95% of time.
For example, if it was estimated that 45% of EU citizens are in favour of a single European currency and this estimate is based on a sample of 100 EU citizens, the associated margin of error is about 10 percentage points. The 95 percent confidence interval for support for a European single currency would be (45%-10%) to (45%+10%), suggesting that in the EU the support for a European single currency could range from 35% to 55%. Because of the small sample size of 100 EU citizens, there is considerable uncertainty about whether or not the citizens of the EU support a single currency.

As a general rule, the more interviews conducted (sample size), the smaller the margin of error. Larger samples are more likely to give results closer to the true population quantity and thus have smaller margins of error. For example, a sample of 500 will produce a margin of error of no more than about 4.5 percentage points, and a sample of 1,000 will produce a margin of error of no more than about 3 percentage points.

(The values in the table are the margin of error – at 95% confidence level – for a given survey estimate and sample size)

The examples show that the size of a sample is a crucial factor affecting the margin of error. Nevertheless, once past a certain point – a sample size of 800 or 1,000 – the improvement is small. For example, to reduce the margin of error to 1.5% would require a sample size of 4,000.)
